PHILOLOGIAN REUNION.

The Philologian Society celebrated its twenty sixth anniversity on Thanksgiving night, by giving the students and town people an opportunity to hear Booker T. Washington discuss the negro problem. The speaker is one of the foremost colored men of the country, and is the Principal of a school at Tuskegee, Alabama, in which both students and teachers are all negroes. The school owns 1800 acres of land, thirty-six buildings, and has over eight hundred pupils. The cost of running it is $80,000 a year.

Mr. Washington was introduced by Dr. Welsh, and in opening, said that some years ago when about six hundred negroes started for Africa to join the colony at Liberia, many people thought that the problem had been solved. "Send the negroes back to Africa where they belong." They forgot that on the day that this colony left this country there were as many more black babies born in the south. In a very humorous way he claimed that his people had a better right here than the white people. "You came here without being asked to come. Nobody wanted you, and you came against the protest of the leading citizens of America in 1492. After you were settled, you could not get along without us, and so at great inconvenience and experse you sent over to Africa for us, and gave us a special pressing invitation to come here. You came when nobody wanted you; we came by your invitation, and now that we are here, we have sense enough to stay."

There are 8,000,000 of black people in this country, and 60,000,000 whites. For two hundred and fifty years the blacks were slaves, and had no idea of doing anything for themselves. It is not fair to expect them to overcome in thirty years what they were so long in learning. The speaker believed that the blacks of the south must be raised by education, and the first principle he teaches his pupils is that work is not degrading. That labor is degrading is an idea prevalent in the south which is not original with the blacks. All sorts of trades are taught at his school, and his pupils go out among the people and teach them how to manage for themselves; how to buy; how to get out of debt. Most of the negroes mortgage their crops before they are sown, and as a result they are hopelessly in debt. They spend their money for things that they do not need. He mentioned one instance where a man paid sixteen dollars for a clock, when not a single member of his family could tell the time of day.

The address was interspersed with many funny anecdotes, and throughout it was instructive, entertaining and amusing.

At the close Mr. Keiple played a violin solo, which showed him to be a master of the instrument.

THAT BURIED CITY.

In '79 A. D., occurred that terrific eruption of Vesuvius which in one day overwhelmed in irremediable ruin the cities of Pompeii, Herculaneum, and Stabiae. For more than 1600 years Pompeii lay undisturbed beneath heaps of ashes and cinder. In 1755 excavations began and since that time wonderful discoveries have been made and the story of this buried city is full of thrilling interest. While traveling in Europe Mr. A. V. Bower made a special study of Pompeii. He secured special pictures of the excavations and has prepared a lecture on the subject that is heard with delight and profit. He uses a powerful stereopticon and one hundred views to illustrate his lecture. This lecture will be given in the Methodist Tabernacle, Bloomsburg, Saturday evening Dec. 5th, under the auspices of the Junior League the proceeds for the new Methodist Church. Admission 25 and 15 cts. The public is cordially invited. Lecture begins at 8:00 o'clock.

DEATH OF REV. G. E. WEEKS.

Rev. G. E. Weeks of Lewisburg, who was formerly pastor of the Baptist Church of this town for four years, and who left here about a year ago, died at the above place on Sunday morning last, of typhoid fever. He bore his affliction very patiently, and after suffering for about four weeks, he passed from this earth of toil and care to his eternal rest. A widow, and two children, Nellie L. and George K. are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. They have the sympathy of all in this their hour of gloom.

DEATH OF A FORMER RESIDENT.

The following article appeared in Mackinaw (Illinois) Enterprize of November 29th:

Mr. Clark Barton, the son of Elisha and Rachel Barton, was born near Bloomsburg, Northumberland county, Pa., on Dec. 21st, 1812, and died at Mackinaw, Ill., Nov. 18, 1896, aged 83 years, 10 months and 27 days. He came to this state in 1835 and settled near Mackinaw, and was married June 19, to Miss Eliza Myers. Ten children were born to them of whom only two survive him, Mr. Al Barton and Mrs. Mary Lindsey. There are eleven grand children and three great grand children living.

Mr Barton was a well known citizen of this place whose loss will be felt by many. During his last prolonged illness he was patient and uncomplaining, though he was suffering from a very painful cancer. Everything was done for him that could be done by his son, Mr. Al Barton, whom he lived with since the death of his wife, to make his closing days peaceful and happy. His death was as peaceful as sleep. He leaves behind a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his departure.

Mr. Barton was one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Mackinaw township. He was a life-long Democrat and has held various township offices. He cast his last vote at the late election. His generosity prevented him from becoming a rich man. The funeral was held from the Christian church on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Old settlers were gathered in large numbers, viewing the remains of one who, with themselves, had braved the trials of pioneer life. The funeral sermon was delivered by Rev. O. W. Stewart, and was eloquent and impressive far beyond the ordinary. There was a large concourse of people present to pay their last respects to the deceased. His remains were interred in the Mackinaw cemetery. The following were the pall-bearers, who were great friends to Mr. Barton while living: Messrs. George Patterson, Daniel Flesher, Jacob Smith, John Haybarger, Sol. and Daniel Puterbaugh. Thus has another old settler gone to his last resting place.

Clark Barton was a son of Elisha Barton, who was a brother of John, Caleb, Isaiah, Cyrus Barton and Mrs Wm. Robison, all of Bloomsburg and vicinity.

His father, Elisha, died when Clark was young and his mother married Peter Pursell, both of whom died at an advanced age in Sunbury, where several of their children still reside.

Clark was the last survivor of Elisha's family, Abram, Elisha and Mrs. Dr. Wm. Moss having all died several years ago, Mrs. Moss at Pekin, Ill., and the others at Mackinaw, Ill.

Before Clark went west he was employed by George Miller in his store at Beach Haven.

The dinner served at the Exchange Hotel on Thanksgiving day was an elaborate affair, splendidly cooked and nicely served. Handsomely printed menus on each table contained a list of the numerous tempting viands, including Blue Points, soups, fish, boiled tongue and ham, roast turkey, beef and lamb, chicken pie, oyster pates, vegetables, salads, deserts, fruits and many other good things.

By the way, the Exchange has taken a place in the front rank, and is one of the best hotels along the Susquehanna. Although extensive improvements and alterations were made when G. Snyder & Son became the owners and proprietors, they are not through yet, but are constantly making further improvements. The wood work of the front has been newly painted, and a fine new upright piano has been placed in the parlor. There is no handsomer office and barroom in the state outside of the large cities, and the proprietors are justly proud of their house.

It is certainly remarkable the causalities that have followed the hanging of Holmes, the multi-murderer, in Philadelphia, some months ago. The judge who tried the case, a number of the jurors, several of the witnesses, some of the lawyers and jailers, have died or suffered some mental trouble since participating in the trial and, on Tuesday, Howard Perkins, a warden of Moyamensing prison, committed suicide by shooting, to end his worry about Holmes' hanging. There are those who say that Holmes had an "evil eye."

NORMAL 39, PHILADELPHIA 0.

The foot ball season came to an end in Bloomsburg on Thanksgiving day when the Normal School defeated the Central High School of Philadelphia by the jug handled score of 39 to 0. From what had been heard of the Philadelphia team, a great many hoped to see a good game which was expected, but were sadly disappointed as the visitors proved no match at all for the Normal, who played all around them and won as they pleased. With this game closed the most successful foot ball season the Normal has ever had. The team was by far the strongest that ever represented the School, and judging from the crowds that attended the games we would think they came out all right financially. The following is a list of the games they have played this year, and the scores made in each game:

At home, Oct. 3, Normal 22, Susquehanna University 0; Oct. 10, Normal 30, Pittston 0. At Kingston, Oct. 17, Normal 0, Wyoming Seminary 0. At home, Oct. 24, Normal 30, Wilkes-Barre 0; Oct. 31, return game with Wyoming Seminary was commenced, but resulted in a squabble before either had scored; Nov. 10, Lafayette 17, Normal 0. This game was the best of the season, and considering the strength of their opponents, the Normal boys made a splendid showing. On November 14 the team which was minus one good man and three others in a crippled condition, went to Lewisburg and were beaten by Bucknell by a score of 18 to 6.

Thus it will be seen that the team has certainly done great work this year. A great deal of credit for the team's good showing is due William Worthington, who has worked hard and spent a great deal of time in getting the boys down to good work.

Unless there is something done to Athletic Park early in the spring, the young men who have been in the habit of spending an hour or two every night in healthful exercise during the summer, will not be able to do so, and they will be compelled to go somewhere else. This would probably be worse for the young men and the town in general. Fix up the Park.

PROF. COLE'S PREDICTIONS FOR DECEMBER.

Our prediction last month: "November will prove a very peculiar month. For while some sections are having sun-shine and summer-like weather, other sections will have nothing but rain, hail, snow, slush, floods, blizzards, high winds, etc.," proved true. That we read the true meaning of the strange position of the Planets, no one, with any sense of honor in them, can doubt for an instant. This month Earth will sail in between Old Red Warrior Mars and the sun. Old Red Warrior Mars will be behind poor Old Mother Earth's back and he will play all sorts of tricks on her. He will cause her to be very restless and angry. Hurricanes, blizzards, cyclones, floods earthquakes, tornadoes, tidal waves and great electrical storms may be looked for in many sections."

HOME WEDDING

Mrs. Dora Ohl and Mr. Rhodes Huff, were married by Rev. B. C. Conner, of the M. E. Church, at the home of the bride on Fifth Street on Tuesday night. William Laycock of town was best man, bridesmaid, Miss Rose Ohl, ushers, W. L. Crist and Harry Hendershott. The ceremony which was a very pretty one, took place in the presence of about sixty invited guests, a number of whom came from St. Johnsville, N. Y., Reading, Pa., Dushore, Pa., and other places.

The collection on Thanksgiving day at St. Paul's Church was twenty dollars. It is the custom with all the Episcopal churches in this diocese to devote this collection to St. Luke's Hospital at South Bethlehem.

The collection at the union services at the Presbyterian church was about sixty dollars, and it will be used for home charities.

The Gorman Bros., pleased a good sized audience at the Opera House Friday night. The musical specialies being especially fine. This is their third annual tour with the successful musical Comedy "The Gillhooley Abroad."

LOVE'S DOUBT.

She hated song, and light, and flowers,
Life was a burden to be borne;
A heavy rosary of hours
Told listlessly from morn to morn.

The long hours leading to the light!
The day-dawn longed for like a friend:
Day slowly wearing to the night!
The dreary night that would not end!

And at the opening of the door
Her weary eyelids rose and fell,
And silence pleased her more and more,
And darkness soothed her like a spell

And when he spoke, she could not speak,
But turned her face for him to see
The little hollows in her cheek
That love had dug there, needlessly.
—The Speaker.

CHOOSING A WIFE.

Theodore Shy was an exceedingly bashful man, and when, after much debating in his mind, he decided to take a wife, his thoughts at once turned to a matrimonial paper as the best means for attaining his object. Not that he was unacquainted with any being on whom he would have been willing to confer the title of Mrs. Theodore Shy, but such was his innate bashfulness that he dreaded his determination being ascertained by his friends, and himself consequently ridiculed.

Theodore Shy, at the time of contemplating this most serious step, was thirty-six years of age. Passably good looking, good tempered, good natured; he possessed a good house, a good income, and all he required was a good wife to make his home happy.

While matters were at this stage Theodore was brought to a full stop, and for this reason—he could not concoct a suitable advertisement.

"Of course," he said, "I don't want an old wife, but I can't advertise that I want a pretty young girl—and I shall certainly want her to be good looking. And what else? Let me see. Modest, musical, amiable, domestic, loving—hang it! I can't do it. If it was ever discovered to be my advertisement I should never hear the end of it.

He was in a dilemma for two days, when he determined to seek the advice of a friend—a young widow, who had often commiserated him on his solitary lot. It is surprising that, being so bashful, he should have actually sought the advice of a lady; and that lady, too, one who would possibly have no objection herself to becoming Mrs. Theodore Shy. But Mrs. Ready was an old friend whom he had known before her marriage, and was the only person he felt he could take into his confidence, being assured of her sympathy and discreetness. She had married when only nineteen, a young lieutenant in the army, who, three months afterward, was inconsiderate enough to leave his wife a widow. She was at this time twenty-five years of age, and exceedingly pretty. Acting on his first impulse, he lost no time in paying the relict of the late Lieut. Ready a visit.

After talking of the weather of yesterday, the prospects of ditto for today and to-morrow, Theodore sought an opening to the subject of his call.

"I wish to seek your advice on a matter of great import to myself.

"Yes."

"There is no one else of whom I should care to ask this advice, and feeling assured of your sympathy and help, I determined to be guided by your counsel, if you would be so good as to give it.

The widow, much surprised and impressed by his seriousness, repressed her inclination to laugh, and said she would be pleased to help him in any way she could.

"Thank you, you are very good," and, taking the widow's hand, Theodore rather profusely expressed his gratitude.

"Well, the fact is," he said, relinquishing her hand—which she made no attempt to withdraw—"I am contemplating marriage, and knowing you—knowing you to be——"

"Yes," said the widow, demurely.

"Knowing you to be more experienced in such matters, and being so kind, so good—so——"

"Yes," she said in a low tone, moving a little near to him. "And——"

"And so disinterested."

Here she gave him an unutterable look of reproach.

"I thought I could not do better than ask your advice as to the lady I wish to marry."

Mrs. Ready looked puzzled. Was he going to propose after all? "Who is the lady?"

"Well, ah! the fact is, I don't know."

"Don't know?"

"No," he went on, hurriedly. "You see, I expect there would be a great deal of chaff at such an old bachelor as myself getting married, and I am anxious to avoid it."

Theodore had, by some process of reasoning, come to believe he was too old to dream of marriage. The widow thought otherwise and ventured to say so.

"Well, at any rate," he said, "my friends think so, and would ridicule the idea, so I've been thinkin gof using the columns of a matrimonial paper for the purpose.

The widow looked aghast.

"What do you want me to do, then?"

"The fact is," he confessed, "I can't make out such an advertisement as I would like, and I want you to help me word one, if you will be so kind."

Writing materials being on the table, the widow sat down and took a sheet of paper on which to commit notes.

"First of all," said the lady, "what sort of a wife do you want?"

This was a staggerer. Theodore examined the pattern of the carpet, the ceiling, the mantlepiece and a half a dozen things, and then turned his eyes to the widow, on whom he gazed intently. It seemed that he now for the first time fully recognized her charms.

"Really," he said, "I cannot describe the sort of lady I should like. You see, it seems so foolish, especially for me."

"Well, then," replied his companion, who had apparently received an inspiration, "I will suggest such and such a point and you shall say whether it would suit you. Now, do you want a young, middle-aged or old lady?"

"Oh! I think—youngish."

"But what do you call youngish? You don't want a girl of sixteen?"

"No, of course, not so young as that."

"Seventeen?"

"No."

"Eighteen?"

"Older than that. I am double that age, you know."

"Oh, are you? Well, then, about what age?"

"How old are y——? I really beg your pardon. I mean about what age?"

The widow smiled complacently.

"I don't mind you knowing my age You know very nearly yourself. I am twenty-five—getting quite old. So you think a lady of my age would suit you?" she said merrily.

Theodore was certain of it.

"Now we have the first requirement Do you wish to say whether she is to be slim or shall we say 'bonny?' "

"I wouldn't put it," said Theodore perspiring. "It looks too— Really this is awkward. Just what I felt when I tried to draw an advertisement up. I do not like very thin or very fat people."

"What shall I say, then?"

Theodore looked again around the room, and came to the conclusion that the widow was of the proportions he desired.

"Like you," he said. Having only just contemplated matrimony, he had never bestowed a thought on the widow's charms until now; and fast becoming hopelessly in love, he wished he had gone and shot himself before he came on his present errand.

"But, you foolish man, how can I put that? What am I?"

"You're an angel."

She laughed merrily.

"Then I must put 'of angelic proportions.' "

"No; let us leave that out altogether."

"Very well. Is she to be pretty?"

"Preferably."

"Good looking, at all events."

"Yes."

"Like myself? coquettishly."

"That's impossible!"

"Is it? Then shall I say 'of good appearance?"

"Yes," dubiously; "though it sounds like a barmaid's requirement."

"And preferences as to height? "

"About your height."

"Well, how tall am I? I'm sure I don't know."

"Have you a measure?" asked Theodore.

She had one on her chatelaine, and as it never apparently occurred to either that the simplest method would be to detach the chatelaine, Theodore felt much embarrassment while he performed his task, measuring the pretty widow first from the ground to the chatelaine, and then from the chatelaine to her crown of hair. Indeed, so hurried was he that the operation had to be performed no less than three times before he was at all certain as to her height.

"Five feet five," he pronounced.

"Is she to be musical?" continued the widow.

Theodore paced around the room. A hitherto unthought of possible calamity now presented itself to him. Musical!

What an escape! Suppose he had rashly engaged himself to some musical being who was not musical; id est, who was shoddy musical? It would have been the one thing to make him commit suicide!

Meanwhile the widow, probably guessing what was passing in his mind for she knew him to be a lover of music, left her visitor for a moment. But what was it he heard? A most lovely voice singing softly with such thrilling sweetness that his whole soul was moved. Ah! what would he give to possess the owner of that voice? Whoever could it be? Not the widow!

But it was, and at that moment she re-entered the room.

"Have you made up your mind?" she said, merrily.

"Yes, I want some one who is really musical."

"Well, but every girl will say she is that."

"What shall I do?"

"Is it really indispensable?"

"Yes."

"Then I would advise you to marry some one you know is really musical."

Oh, bashful man! He was already madly in love with this woman, and he never took the hint.

Perhaps he did not see it.

"But I don't care for any musical lady I know of—except one," he added, confusedly.

"Then, why not ask her?"

"She wouldn't have me—I should never think of asking."

"How do you know she would refuse when you have never asked?"

"She's too good for me."

"Nonsense. There is no woman too good for you."

"Thank you, but I really couldn't ask."

"How do you know she is not in love with you, and if that is the case you ought to."

"Oh, but it's most unlikely."

"Suppose it is likely," persisted the widow, "should you in that case disapprove her telling you so?"

"No; I think we'll leave musical out of the question. If I were only sure of her being as musical as you——"

"Why, you silly man. You are wanting her to be like me in everything."

"I do."

But he went no further, and the widow proceeded:

"Is she to be domesticated? Of course, if she is to be like me, I will put it. Now is there anything else? Money?"

"No."

"Then we'll draw up the advertisement."

"That I can't do," said Theodore. "I'm really very sorry to have given you all this trouble; but I can't do it."

"Well, what shall you do?"

"I don't know. Remain a bachelor perhaps. But I won't advertise. You'll pardon me for the trouble I've given you?"

"Oh, don't mention it. I should be very glad to help you—more glad than I can say. It is so sad to see a good man like you leading a solitary existence."

"You are very kind. Good morning."

"But stay a moment. Did you not say," continued she, blushing, "that you would prefer some one like me for your wife?"

"Yes."

"Then why not ask me?"

And he did.—Boston Traveler.

Not Permitted.

"That was tough on Davis."

"What?"

"He stepped on a banana peel, fell and was arrested for giving a street performance without a license."

The Modern Hotel Clerk.

A good hotel clerk must know everything. He must be able to read the innermost thoughts of every guest that comes to his house. He must be ready to answer every question that is asked, whether concerning railroad trains, pedestrianism, politics, law, science, geography, astronomy, theology. Houston, Texas, has one of the brightest hotel clerks in the world. He is always affable, ready with any kind of information whatever, and never has to be asked twice for anything.

Two drummers were sitting in the lobby of this hotel a few nights ago, and one of them was telling the other about the clerk's readiness, and said:

"I'll bet you the drinks that if you open that newspaper that you have in your hand, select the first phrase that meets your eye, and then walk over to the clerk and say it over to him, he will respond in some way without a moment's hesitation.

The drummer opened the paper by chance at a political article, and the first words he saw were, "The greatest good to the greatest number." He walked over to the clerk's desk, leaned his elbow on it, and said, seriously, "The greatest good to the greatest number."

The clerk smiled pleasantly, tapped a bell, and said to the bellboy, "Take a bottle of whiskey up to room 9."

The First Christmas Gift.

Make Your Gift a Pure One, and Give it With Love.

"If you had the wealth of the world you could not equal that first Christmas gift," writes Ruth Ashmore in an article on "Girls and Their Christmas-Giving," in the December Ladies' Home Journal. "And you can only imitate it by making your gift a pure one, and giving it with love. You want to share, this Christmastide, your faith, your hope and your charity with those you love. You mant to make your very 'good-morning' tell of that good morning that came so many hundred years ago when the little Child first wakened on this earth. You want to think of the gifts that were brought to Him and what they typified. You want to have your heart full of joy, and love, and hope—so full that it will brim over and the rest of the world share it with you. You want to tell, in your speech and in your eyes, and from your heart, of the gladness of the time. You want to make this gladness go out to some one who is in grief. These are the days when you must needs give of your good things, and among all your possessions there is nothing so good as a belief in God and a hope for the future. That was what the little Child came to tell about. Surely the Christmastide is the feast of all others that appeals to women, and as the story is told again and again by the bells as they ring, by the carols as they are sung, by the preacher from the pulpit, we know that 'Unto us a Child is born,' and peace and good will reign all over the land. Let peace and good will be in your heart, and from you they will go and spread all over the land. It is to the women, thank God, that the happiness of the Christmastide specially comes. And women are generous, else one of them never would have given her Son to die that all might live. She gave to all the world her only Son—the gift that meant eternal life."

WASHINGTON.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27th, 1896.

There is at least one Republican Senator who thinks that the McKinley administration will have to borrow money very early in its career, notwithstanding the assertions of the party stump speakers and editors during the campaign that it would never, under any circumstances, do such a thing. Senator Chandler not only thinks that the McKinley administration will have to borrow money, but he has prepared a plan for it to do so, and it is supposed that he will put it in the form of a bill which he will introduce into Congress. His plan is in short to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow as much money as may be needed to make up the difference between the government receipts and expenditures so long as there is a deficit, the loans to be made payable in a short period. Mr. Chandler seems to agree with the statements made on the stump by silver men, that the election of McKinley would mean among other things a further increase in the national debt by the Government borrowing more money, but other Republicans will favor exhausting all other methods of trying to pull through before resorting to another loan in any shape.

Even if there is a Republican majority in the Senate, they could not accomplish any tariff legislation at this session of Congress, unless some way could be devised of reconciling the wide difference of opinion among them as to what ought to be done. There is some talk of an attempt to add to the government revenues by internal revenue legislation, and a project of adding $1 a barrel to the tax on beer, which came so near being incorporated in the Wilson tariff bill by the Democratic Ways and Means committee of the last House, has been revived and may be recommended in President Cleveland's annual message. The influence of the brewers killed it when it was proposed before, and now in addition to that it will have to contend with the opposition of the high tariff Republicans who want to leave the whole revenue question just where it is in order to have an excuse for an extra session of Congress.

The vacant seat on the bench of the Court of claims which gossip had assigned to one of the members of President Cleveland's cabinet went to Assistant Attorney General Howry, whose official duties have made him thoroughly familiar with the business of this court. Judge Howry's legal attainments are high and there is no personal objection to him, but if the idea advocated by a considerable number of silver men, of hanging up all of Mr. Cleveland's nominations in the Senate, be carried out, his nomination will fail with all the rest.

Whatever may be one's individual opinions, it is clearly apparent that the action of prominent gold Democrats, in trying to get the administration to remove Democratic officials in a number of states because they supported Bryan, is not calculated to wipe out the existing bitterness between the regular Democrats and the bolters. In the Post Office department alone attacks are being made by the bolters upon more than fifty Presidential postmasters. It is not likely that any considerable number of these, or any other officials the nomination of whose successors has to be confirmed by the Senate, will be removed, because, whatever may be the result of the proposition to take no action upon any nominations, it is certain that the Senate as at present constituted will not confirm the nomination of any gold Democrat for a position from which a man was removed for no other reason than that he followed his convictions, and supported silver. That knowledge will probably prevent action by the administration on the complaints of the gold Democrats.

The four Democratic Senators who bolted the nomination of Bryan—Palmer of Ill., Vilas of Wis., Gray of Del., and Caffery of La.—will not be admitted to the caucus of Democratic Senators which will be held as soon as Congress meets, for the purpose of deciding upon a line of party policy during the session. In addition to the party caucus there will be a silver caucus, attended by the Populists, the silver Republicans and the Democrats, and it is expected that an agreement will be reached under which the silver Senators will act together in all matters concerning finance. While it is not thought that the bolting gold Democratic Senators will caucus with the Republicans, it is believed that they will vote with them upon financial questions.

The Republicans of Washington are in a state of mind because a gold Democrat has been slated for chairman of the McKinley inauguration committee, and they have made a vigorous protest against his being given the place, both to Mark Hanna and to McKinley, and the local Republicans are right, too; but inasmuch as the gold Democrat who has been promised the place was a big contributor to Mark Hanna's campaign fund their protest will probably count for nothing. It is customary to have all parties represented on the inauguration committee, but if this gold Democrat gets what he paid for it will be the first time that a chairman of the committee has not been a member of the party which elected the President.

The Paid Choir.

Unnecessary Economy in Church Music a Grievous Mistake.

"It is very difficult for some very excellent and otherwise broad-minded church people to realize that good music is one of the most powerful auxiliaries to successful church work," writes Edward W. Bok in the December Ladies' Home Journal. "* * * Music naturally appeals to a far larger number of people than preaching ever has or can, no matter how good its quality. * * * A church desirous of reaching the largest number of people and doing the greatest amount of good must adjust itself to prevailing conditions. If good music will attract where other attractions fail, why not employ this auxiliary? * * * But good church music can rarely be had from a volunteer choir. And I say this with all due respect to the thousands who each Sunday throughout our country volunteer their services in divine song. There are innumerable cases where a paid choir is out of the question. I have known of such instances where the singing by volunteer choirs was good. But they are the exceptions; by no means the rule. And it stands to reason that this should be so. Excellence in any kind of work calls for study and preparation. To be a good singer requires years of study and training. And years of hard, practical work must follow the study period. * * * The voice must be cultivated, it must be trained. And this calls for infinite patience, time and money. Trained voices naturally cannot be expected to give the results of all this without compensation. And the fact that their services are asked by the church and in the cause of religion does not affect the justice of remuneration. Ministers and janitors are paid, and so should be our church singers if they have good voices. * * * Where a church is able to maintain a paid choir, and seeks to economize with volunteer voices, there is, in particular, a grievous mistake committed. Music hath charms, it has been truly said, and it has to every one. A church able to spend something on its music cannot afford to have aught but the best it is within its means to employ. Those who regulate the affairs of our churches should bear this fact in mind in connection with their approaching Christmas festivities and for their regular services in the new year before them. There would be far fewer empty pews in some of our churches during 1897 if there were better voices in the choirs."

A Mixed Prayer.

A little four-year-old girl was saying her prayers the other night, and after her "Now I Lay Me" asked God to bless her papa, mamma, each one of her brothers and sisters, and Mr. and Mrs. Black, mentioning a lady and gentleman of whom the little daughter was very fond, and who had dined with the family that night.

Her wise older sister of six years listened critically to the prayer, and when it was done said severely:

"It isn't necessary to pray for any one outside of your own family. You shouldn't have prayed for Mr. and Mrs. Black. God might get so many names mixed up."—Ex.

DANGER IN ROENTGEN RAYS.

An Experimenter Loses Five of His Finger Nails.

A warning has been voiced by one of the leading English medical journals in regard to the too frequent use of the Roentgen ray apparatus, says the Philadelphia "Ledger."

It is interesting, no dubt, to obtain a series of photographs of one's own skeleton, but if this is to be at the expense of such trifles as one's hair and one's finger nails, it seems hardly worth the cost. One electrical engineer, who has often demonstrated the the beauty of his own finger bones by placing one of his hands within the radius of the searching rays, has lost all the nails from the fingers of that hand, while Mr. Sidney Rowland, who is one of the leading experimenters in this direction, mentions several cases of similar character in the structural changes that occur in the hair, and so forth, of those who have been frequently shadowgraphed by this method. Thus, in the case of patients whose heads have been subjected to the influence of the rays, the hair has either turned white or has fallen out entirely. It is suggested that these results are due to the electrical potency of what are called the ultra violet rays of the spectrum, though their precise action is at present by no means thoroughly understood.

One curious suggestion has already been made. It is a well-known superstition, and one which has existed for generations, that the people who sleep in the direct rays of the moon have their reasin more or less seriously affected. Now it is said that these ultra violet rays exist in the moonlight, and hence a popular superstition may be founded upon scientific fact.

The Dyspepsia Proof Eskimo.

Much is said about American dyspepsia, but there is one native race of America that is certainly not greatly troubled by the modern curse. The sturdy little Eskimos defy all the laws of hygiene and thrive. The Eskimo, like the ordinary dweller in America, eats until he is satisfied, but there is this difference, that he never is satisfied while a shred of the feast remains unconsumed. His capacity is limited by the supply, and by that only.

He cannot make any mistake about the manner of cooking his food, for as a rule he does not cook it, nor so far as the blubber or fat of the Arctic animal is concerned, about his method of eating it, for he simply does not eat it; he cuts it into long strips an inch wide and an inch thick, and then lowers the strips down his throat as one might lower a rope into a well.

And after all that he does not suffer from indigestion. He can make a good meal off the flesh and skin of the walrus, provision so hard and gritty that in cutting up the animal the knife must be continually sharpened.

The teeth of a little Eskimo child will meet in a bit of walrus skin as the teeth of an American child would meet in the flesh of an apple. And that when the hide of the walrus is from one-half to one and one-half inches in thickness, and bears considerable resemblance to the skin of an elephant. The Eskimo child will bite it and digest it, too, and never know what dyspepsia means.

Curiosities of Seeing.

How many persons have observed the fact that if we run our eyes along the side of a room, or along the horizon, the eyeballs do not follow the movement of the head with a smooth, uniform motion, but keep in line by a series of quick, short, almost imperceptible jerks, just as the second hand of a watch moves? At first one may think that this is not so, but careful experiment will prove that it is.

If the eyes are fixed on a moving object, then the motion of the eyeballs in following the object is uniform; but when it is the head that moves, while the objects looked at remain fixed, the eyeballs perform in the manner just described.

It is not necessary in order to observe this phenomenon that visible objects should be before the eyes. Let the reader shut his eyes, press the fingers lightly on the closed lids, and then turn the head from side to side. The little jerks with which the eyeballs follow the motion of the head will be distinctly perceived.

The Retort Discourteous.

She—It seems to be a necessary part of every one's life to have a hobby, and, while we ridicule every one's, we never seem to realize how ridiculous is our own. Er, what is yours, by the way?

He—Mine? Ah, yes! I have a hobby of course. It is one, too, which I find to be quite popular with people of intelligence; it is the collection of rarities.

She—Indeed! That explains, then, why you pause so often to collect your thoughts.—Boston Courier.

Sunlight is Death to Bacteria.

Fresh experiments on the power of sunshine to kill disease germs were described at a recent meeting of the Biological Society of Washington. In such experiments a plate of gelatine is sown with bacteria, and then portions of the plate are covered, while the remainder is exposed to direct sunshine. In the exposed places the organisms are killed, while they flourish in the shaded parts. This fact is used to explain the beneficial effects of sunlight allowed to flood a sick room.

Li Hanged Chang.

"No," said the Boston girl firmly, "I do not care to meet the Chinese Viceroy. Any man who is so lost to the rules of polite language as to use 'Hung' in place of 'Hanged' is beneath my notice."

A CRY OF WARNING.

"I suffered for years and years with womb and kidney trouble in their worst forms.

"I had terrible pains in my abdomen and back; could hardly drag myself around; had the 'blues' all the time, was cross to every one; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me of all my pains.

"I cannot praise it enough, and cry aloud to all women that their suffering is unnecessary; go to your druggist and get a bottle that you may try it anyway. You owe this chance of recovery to yourself."—MRS. J. STENARD, 2218 Amber St., Kensingston, Phila., Pa.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1896.

Congress meets next Monday.

The fight for a United States Senator to succeed Don Cameron is now on. John Wanamaker's boom seems to be on top.

Democracy never dies. Its principles will live forever. Though defeated, it always comes to the front again, and it will be on hand reunited and invigorated, when the proper time comes.

MAKING POLITICAL ASSESSMENTS.

Among the reforms we are to get at the hands of the Legislature at its coming session is to prevent the collection of assessments from public officials for political purposes. Particular attention has been directed to this matter by the discussion that has arisen from the collection of contributions in the recent local campaign.

If an act can be framed and passed that will completely put a stop to the levying of assessments on officeholders no doubt it would have very general public approval. It might also do something to lessen the evil of money in politics. It is doubtful, however, if a law can be made to cover the subject thoroughly and effectively. The evil cannot be wholly eradicated unless it is possible to prohibit every sort of contribution, enforced or voluntary, by an officeholder to a party committee, and it is not to be supposed the Legislature will attempt to determine how a man shall spend his money, to prevent him from making a really voluntary contribution if he saw fit, or to light cigars with it, or throw it into the gutter.

But as long as an official may voluntarily contribute the prohibition of an assessment may be in a considerable degree evaded, this is the fact with the Federal civil service law. That act was pretty carefully constructed. It not only prohibits the levying of political assessments, but it prohibits the solicitation of them on the part of any one in the Government service, or of anyone in that service in any Government building. It also declares that no one shall be disturbed in his position by reason of his refusal to contribute to a party campaign fund. This act was intended to cover all the ground which could possibly be covered by a law, and in particular to prevent the head of a department from imposing an assessment upon his subordinate.

It has had the effect of driving out of the Government buildings and offices the scandalous business of soliciting and collecting assessments, which is to be accounted a great deal. But it could not interfere with the making of voluntary contributions, reference to which always causes the knowing person to wink the other eye Voluntary contributions are very generally a myth. The contributions made are not voluntary. Though the law assumes to protect those who may decline to contribute there are ways found to get rid of the delinquent without connecting his dismissal with the failure to make a voluntary contribution to his party. The letter of the law is observed; the spirit of it is broken.

As long, therefore, as an official cannot be prevented from making any sort of contribution there will not be a complete reform. The most of the voluntary contributions are now made under compulsion. Perhaps, however, the wisdom of those who are going to work so many reforms for us at the coming session of the Legislature will find a way to stop the holes now so apparent in this reform.—Phila. Press.

The contemplated "reform" that will prohibit office holders from contributing to campaign funds, is one that is agitated periodically. It is generally started by some fellow who has been compelled to pay over a portion of a fat salary to a campaign committee. The theory is all right, but the practice is a bad one. Who is going to pay for brass bands, fire works, speakers, uniforms, torches, printing, and all the other accessories of a political campaign, if not the men who hold office and draw big salaries, and those who want to be office-holders? Those who get the plums must help to cultivate the tree. If we can ever get back to the principle that the office should seek the man, and not the man the office, it will be well then to agitate this reform, but so long as politics is what it is today, it is mere sentimental nonsense to talk of it. As candidates go nowadays, they spend any amount of money to secure a party nomination, and work day and night to get votes at the delegate election, and after securing the prize they rest on their oars. Why should they not be expected to contribute towards campaign expenses?

Let the legislation rather devote its attention to the passage of laws that will purify the elections; let the laws now in existence relating to frauds at the polls, and to the unlawful expenditure of money, be enforced by the people, and it will make little difference where the money comes from, whether from the pockets of public officials, or from private citizens who give only from patriotic motives.

An Instant Party Duty.

Those impatient Protectionists who insist that Mr. McKinley should begin business by calling Congress together in extra session to tinker the tariff and bring on another tedious and exasperating period of industrial doubt and distress are neither safe nor disinterested advisers. They want a change in the hope of advancing their own interests. The mass of the people, on the contrary, who are never the better off for special legislation, are desirous of political rest and time for recuperation.

It should be remembered, moreover, that the Republican majority in the present House is larger than the majority in the next Congress. If patriotism and an honest desire for immediate provision for the public welfare should guide the counsels of the Republican Representatives they would lose no time in passing a simple, unobjectionable measure of purely revenue taxation to cover the probable Treasury deficit. To send such a bill to the Senate would be to lift the party out of the rut into which it has fallen as the obsequious agency of interests which dominate its counsels.

But if the Republican leaders shall listen to the cry of subsidists and bounty-seekers, while neglecting the great task imposed upon their party by the people of restoring a safe system of finance, there is grave danger that the peril from which the nation has but freshly emerged will again darken the land. It is no exaggeration to say that there is not another civilized government in the world with which, with such ready means of extrication from fiscal difficulties at hand, there would be any delay in adopting immediate measures of relief.—Record.

The Philadelphia Record is led to observe that "whoever scores a debt, and is able to pay it, and doesn't pay it, is a drone, a mossback and an obstructionist. But the man who pays is like a spring which constantly gives what it gets for the world's refreshment. The cheerful payer should take his place alongside the cheerful giver as a twin deserver in the estimation of his kind and his Creator."

"General Gomez, the Cuban patriot leader, has thirty five thousand well armed men under him. He knows how to handle them too for there is no marching them up the hill then marching them down again where he is concerned. Every move he makes has a well defined strategical object and is usually accomplished, while Weyler bobs around like a cork on a storm tossed sea."

A great storm which swept over the western country last week has resulted in some loss of human life and great loss to live stock. Snow drifted to the height of twelve feet and people are penned up and starving. A coat of ice covers the ground, the like of which was never known before.

The excitement caused in the vicinity of Hollidaysburg by the wholesale poisoning of guests at the banquet given by Mr. and Mrs. Stewart on Saturday last, has about subsided, and the sixty guests who were poisoned are nearly all out of danger.

FITZSIMMONS—SHARKEY.

Not since Peter Jackson and Jim Corbett danced about each other for nearly five hours before the members of the California athletic club has such enormous interest been aroused in a fight between heavyweights as that exhibited Wednesday night at San Francisco between Fitzsimmons and Sharkey.

Fitzsimmons' blow in the eight round was declared a foul and the fight was given to Sharkey.

You Have Waited for This.

There are many people who would be glad to abandon the habit of drinking coffee if they could only find some substitute for it. That substitute is Grain-O, made from pure grains and, in the opinion of those who have given it a thorough trial, a beverage in every way preferable to coffee. Grain-O is not a stimulant,—it is something better. It is cheering, nutritious and strengthening. In other words it is a food drink, as coffee is not. It is acceptable to the most delicate stomach, and agrees even with confirmed dyspeptics. Unlike coffee Grain O produces no nervous action. It never interferes with sleep. As for the flavor of Grain-O, people who use it say that after using it a week or two they like its taste better than that of coffee. Grain-O is sold by all grocers at 15c. and 25c. per package. Try it.

It may be a little early to do your spring papering, but not too early to look over our large stock now ready for your inspection. In spite of the fact that the manufacturers charge us from 10 to 20 per cent. more than last year, we will sell at last year's low prices, and in some cases even lower.

RARE BARGAINS FOR YOU!

Now is the time if you are looking for what are genuine bargains in dry goods and coats. We are offering you goods at a loss. Why? Because they are odd lots which always accumulate in a stock of goods, and which must be gotten rid of. They are just as good as when they were new. Nothing wrong with them only they must go at the price we put on them. Will you get some of them?

DRESS GOODS.

They occupy a place in our centre aisle, and are easy to see. Plaids, mixed and plain goods, and are just what you want for school dresses, wrappers or a dress to wear in the morning. They sold from 45c. to $1.00 the yd. Now for 29c. the yd.

COATS.

We have a few coats, they were left over from last year. Could be made to look like this year's coats with a little trouble. Sold them for $10, $12 and $15—now they are marked $5. Our kersey cloth coat that we are offering for $5 is the best in town.

BLANKETS.

You know our reputation for blankets. We sell the best make we can buy. Have sold the same make for years. Women who buy a pair always come back when in need of more. What better recommendation can you get? We make a special sale on one lot until they are gone, which won't be long. 10-4 not quite all wool, but will keep you warm just as well $3.76.

SHAWLS.

This weather makes one feel like looking for them. They are good, best bargains we ever had to offer. Think of an all wool shawl for $3.98. Better ones best to be had at $6.00.

DISHES.

We want you to keep in mind our dishes. Xmas is coming and then you will be wanting a few, maybe a full set—maybe some odd pieces of china. Our display will be ready next week, and occupy our main aisle of the dry goods side. Lamps will be there in abundance.

UNDERWEAR.

We are selling underwear at a price that will tell its own story. A backward season makes a low price in goods and the purchaser always gets the benefit. Lots of our underwear is worth one-half again as much as we ask. Will you take advantage of it?

ALMOST DROWNED BY DOGS.

Bietauset's Narrow Escape From Death in the River.

George Bietauset, a New York German brewer, has a big white bulldog and a lively little Scotch terrier, who are pets of the whole neighborhood. The dogs are fond of the water, and Bietauset frequently had taken them down to the river front near his house to give them a little frolic.

One night last summer, accompanied by his wife and two boys, the brewer took the dogs down to the Jane street dock. They were fastened together on the ends of a check rope eight feet long, and he held the middle of the rope while he stood on the unprotected slanting gangway near the street end of the pier. He intended to kep one dog on the pier while the other had a dip in the river. The terrier had a bath first. Bietauset held the check rope, while the bulldog barked and sprang about in frantic anxiety to join the terrier in the water. The bulldog, in prancing about, got the check rope, which was stout and tough, so tangled around one of Bietauset's legs that the brewer had to let go to free himself. The instant he released his grip the bulldog sprang into the river, and its master, being unprepared, was dragged from his footing into the water. He fell head first, and the two dogs, tugging at the rope, rendered it impossible for him to keep his head above water. Bietauset weighs about 180 pounds, and does not know how to swim. His wife, who knew this, became greatly frightened and screamed to him, when he got his head out of water, to seize the piles of the pier. The tide was low and running out, and the brewer's frantic efforts to get near the piles only caused his head to go under water again. His sons, lads of 7 and 8 years, and half a dozen other boys of about the same age, shouted for help. Their cries brought several workingmen from the brewery opposite Bietauset's home, but none of the big fellows could swim. They leaned over the stringpiece of the pier, and held their arms down as far as they could toward the water and yelled to their fellow workman to give them a grip of his hand. But the dogs kept tugging at the check rope, drawing it more tightly around his legs and dousing him under water.

Bietauset had been more than five minutes in the water, and was rapidly becoming exhausted, when 17-year-old William Walsh came dashing up, and seeing the brewer's predicament, promptly sprang into the water and swam out to aid him. As he caught hold of Bietauset's hair, and held his head up out of the water, the two dogs got the idea that he was going to hurt their master, and both sprang upon him. He had to devote almost his entire energy to beating off the dogs and keeping them from dragging their master's head under water. It was a desperate battle, and in five minutes Bietauset, who had swallowed a deal of salt water, became exhausted and fainted away. His wife, who had been a helpless spectator of the struggle, gave a loud scream and fell back upon the pier in a faint. The urchins around the pier and the brewers scurried around hunting for a boat, while Walsh kept shouting for help. Five minutes passed before the men found a rowboat, a half a block away. They jumped in and rowed to the pier. Bietauset was completely unconscious when they dragged him and Walsh into the boat.

Searching for a Wife.

He made up his mind he ought to marry, and then he started on a still hunt for a good, sensible girl for a wife.

He saw a young lady on a crowded street car who was not occupying two seats, and he thought: "This is promising. I will keep my eye on her."

He met a young lady on the street who wore a gown that did not trail in the dirt, and he thought: "She's worth watching. She has some sense."

He was suddenly pushed against a young lady in a crowded corridor, who did not stare at him and mutter "Awkward brute'" when he apologized, and he thought: "There's a gem, truly."

He was introduced to a young lady at a ball who was not overdressed, and yet who wore a waist that was visible to the naked eye, and he thought: "Taste, modesty and sense. That's a good combination."

He sat behind a young lady in a theatre who took off her hat, and let him get a glimpse of the stage, and he thought: "Consideration for others is a great point. I must find out who she is."

He stood behind a young lady in a dry goods store who did not paw over everything in sight and keep one clerk busy for half an hour that she might buy a spool of thread, and he thought: "She must really be a treasure."

"Queen of your sex!" he exclaimed, impetuously. "Beacon light in the darkness of woman's ways! Shining star of progress toward a better conception of the courtesies of life! Will you be mine?"

And she said she would if her husband would let her.

But he collapsed.

Sorrow Laden.

"Troubles never come singly," said the man who secured a divorce.

"What's the matter?"

"Oh, first I got clear of my first wife, and then, like a fool, I married again."—Philadelphia North American.

A QUEER RECONCILIATION.

Pathos and Comedy Mingled by Strange Couples at Pittsburg.

Herman Krieger and Mrs. Frank Whittaker eloped from New York, each leaving a married partner behind. Mrs. Whittaker took her little daughter with her. The couple were caught at Pittsburg, and a local paper gives this humorous version of the final episode:

Mr. Whittaker arrived with Mrs. Krieger. They went to the Central Police Station, where a pathetic and ludicrous reconciliation took place.

Whittaker first kised his child, and then kissed the mother. The latter did not like it at first, and "made a face." He said he would forgive her, but she did not care if he didn't.

The child kised and hugged her father, and wanted him to take her home with her mamma. The latter did not want to go back to New York, and said she had enough of Whittaker. Then the child went from one to another with her caresses and told her "mamma" to kiss "papa." Before they knew it both parents had tears in their eyes. Then Whittaker again pleaded with his wife, and she threw her arms around his neck. As she passed out of the door of the police station she was wiping the tears from her eyes and asked: "Is my hat on straight, Ida?"

The amicable adjustment of the differences between Whittaker and wife left no charges against Krieger. His better half, however, announced that she was tired of being ill treated by her husband, and declared that she would return to New York as soon as she could prepare evidence for a divorce.

Krieger thought his personal appearance had something to do with his wife's condition of mind. He said: "I may not look nice now, but when I get shaved and put on a clean shirt I will look different."

The woman said she did not care if he ever put on a clean shirt. The police officers at length persuaded her to leave with her erring husband. She declared that she would never live with him again.

After Herman had taken her through the park and showered attentions on her, her heart softened. By dinner time Whittaker, Krieger and the two women and the little girl were as merry as any crowd of sight seers in Pittsburg.

Too Promising to be True.

It is claimed that a French engineer has discovered a process for solidifying petroleum to be used as fuel. It is pressed into cakes, and may be stored away like cordwood. It is not affected by heat or cold, and burns absolutely without odor or smoke. These cakes can be pressed into any shape or size, and when set on fire burn very slowly, but with the most intense heat. There is no evaporation or explosive quality about them, and they will burn with very little draft. So concentrated is the heat in them that it is said that a vessel carrying a thousand tons of this fuel could sail around the world without renewing its stores. The inventor of this material declares that a ton of it equals thirty tons of coal, and as the estimated cost is not over ten dollars a ton, it follows that steel may be manufactured at a much less expense than at present. Indeed, five hundred pounds of this fuel at a cost of two dollars would melt a ton of metal. If the claims for this new fuel are substantiated, a revolution in manufactures is begun, and all persons who have occasion to consume a great amount of fuel will find their expenditures greatly decreased. As a household heating material it would be unapproachable, while in the manufactures and arts its value can as yet scarcely be computed.

Foolish Fears.

"There's a gentleman in the parlor, dear, who wishes to see you," said the young wife.

"Do you know who it is dear?" inquired the husband.

"You must forgive me, love, but that cough of yours has worried me of late, and you take such poor care of your health, and—you don't know how anxious I've been, and—oh, if I were to lose you, my darling!" she exclaimed, bursting into tears.

"There, there, dear. Your fondness for me has inspired foolish and unnecessary fears. I'm all right; you mustn't be alarmed. But I'll see the physician, of course, just to satisfy you. Is it Dr. Pellet?"

"N-no, it's not a doctor, it's a—a—life insurance agent."

Led into a Trap.

Young Wife—"Why, dear, you were the stroke oar at colege, weren't you?"

Young Husband—"Yes, love."

"And a prominent member of the gymnastic class?"

"I was the leader."

"And quite a hand at all athletic exercises?"

"Quite a hand? My gracious! I was the champion walker, the best runner, the head man at lifting heavy weights, and as for carrying—why, I could shoulder a barrel of flour and"

"Well, love, just please carry the baby for a couple of hours. I'm tired."

Selling on Time.

Customer—Excuse me, sir, but do you sell cigars on time?

Cigar Dealer—Never to strangers.

Customer—Beg pardon, but I'll bet you will in this instance. (Throwing down a quarter.) There's a quarter after three, see?—Boston Courier.

Re—There is one thing I like about you, Miss Daisy.

Miss Daisy—And what is that?

He—My arm.—Tid-Bits.

Giving the Snap Away.

A few Republican newspapers are already hedging on the "return of prosperity" and say that if prosperity has not really returned times can get no worse, because of the Republican victory. But that is not what the people were promised. They complained of the times and the Republican orators and newspapers helped them to do so. They wanted the times improved and Republican leaders promised them abundant prosperity in case of Republican sucess. Immediately after the election the telegraph wires were nearly worn to threads carrying messages about this and that industry starting up and employing more hands, etc.

Now that managers of industrial plants deny they are doing as much business as Republican newspapers and news agents said, it would be in better taste for Republican organs to say nothing rather than make the public observation that if "times are not better the recent victory will prevent them getting worse." It calls attention to the fact that industrial plants were shut down prior to the election for political effect. It reminds the people that pay envelopes promised all sorts of benefits to follow immediately upon Republican success. It makes us recollect that one industrial plant, whose management said it could not be reopened until McKinley should be elected and that they had to close because lack of public confidence had disturbed business so much that work in the establishment could not be continued, was opened up immediately after election with a big flourish of trumpets, they announcing that they had received orders from one of their traveling agents for $50,000 worth of merchandise which he had secured in the previous forty days. In other words, while the plant was closed because there was no business to be had one agent was doing more than a thousand dollars' worth a day in what is the annual dull season in that business.

We want prosperity, and we shall do our share to secure it. We shall welcome any revival of business. But to make prosperity real and tangible we are compelled to expose the tricks and shams of politically managed industries. There is no doubt that more business is being done now than was done immediately before the election. But we deny—on the authority of the managers themselves—that as much is done as has been represented. And we deny that there is any business being done now that would not be doing with Bryan as President-elect.—Harrisburg Patriot.

Large Prices For Unexpired Leases.

Two hundred thousand dollars is said to have been paid for an unexpired lease in Boston, and the tenant of an office in a building which it was intended to improve is said to have been paid $30,000 to find another room. In fact, long leases of well situated buildings in a growing city are often very good property. Many a man has secured for himself a good income, and sometimes a large one, for several years, without any trouble and practically without risk, by taking advantage of an opportunity to secure on moderate terms a long lease of an estate already occupied or available for tenants. If the income received from the subtenants does not pay the agreed rent of the estate, a little energy expended in getting tenants for the unoccupied rooms will generally be sufficient to make up the deficit, and the increasing demand which is sure to follow the extension of business soon justifies advances in the sulrents, to the profit of the principal lessee, while there are always chances that the principal lease may, through some unforeseen contingency, be disposed of at a large profit.—American Architect.

Few people know that all plants contain digestive principles. They cannot absorb their food until it is digested any more than animals can. The Mount Lebanon Shakers have learned the art of extracting and utilizing these digestive principles, and it is for this reason that their Shaker Digestive Cordial is meeting with such phenomenal success in the treatment of dyspepsia. The Shaker Digestive Cordial not only contains food already digested, but it also contains digestive principles which aid the digestion of other foods that may be eaten with it. A single 10 cent sample bottle will be sufficient to demonstrate its value, and we suggest that every suffering dyspeptic make a trial of it. Any druggist can supply it.

What brings relief from dirt and grease? Why don't you know?
SAPOLIO

To test the supposed advantages of a nap after dinner Dr. Schule of Fribourg has made a series of experiments on two normal subjects. The contents of the stomach were analyzed a few hours after meals, some of which were followed by sleep and some of which were not, and the results indicate that sleep weakens the stomach's movements, while the acidity of the gastric juice is increased. On the other hand, simple repose in a horizontal position stimulates the motion of the stomach without increasing the acidity of the gastric juice. It is concluded, therefore, that one should stretch himself out for a rest after a hearty meal, but should not go to sleep, especially if the stomach is in a dilated condition or its juice very acid.—Detroit News.

AN UNWELCOME GUEST.

How He Worked the Landlord for Pants and Money.

There are still places in Spain which, although comparatively intelligent and thickly inhabited, are yet centuries behind a knowledge of some of the wicked ways of the world. A recent occurrence in a community not a thousand miles from Madrid makes this observation strikingly true.

A citizen of that city, who might have been the counterpart of a stranded actor, found himself penniless in a certain town. He entered the best hotel the place possessed, and demanded a good room with a good supper. Both were provided. The formalities in vogue with strange guests as to luggage, etc., were scarcely known here, or, at least, not put in practice in this particular instance.

After supper the guest slept the sleep if not of the just, at least a very good article of imitation. But at the dawn of morning he raised the whole household with his angry shouts. On the landlord's rushing to his room in hot haste, he demanded to know who had entered his room and stolen his trousers.

The landlord went pale. Feebly looking around he noticed the garment was missing.

"I had them on when I came in," said the traveler, confidently and sarcastically. "You can't deny that. What's become of them?"

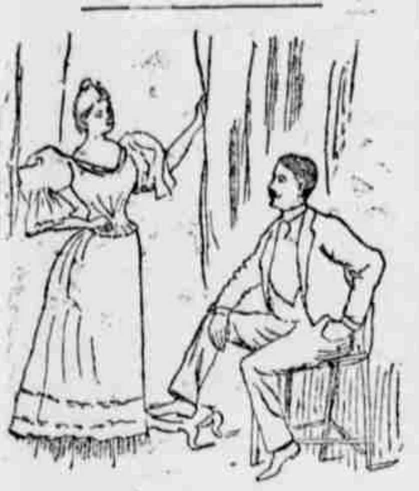
The landlord gave orders for a thorough search of the establishment inside and out. The one or two servants were closely questioned. Nothing was known of the missing legwear. In despair he returned to his infuriated guest.

"Not to be found, sir."

"Not to be found? Come, come, that story won't do! I want my trousers and the purse with ten pounds odd it contained. Otherwise, sir, I'll blazon the robbery to the world."

This would never do, so after much persuasion the landlord induced him to accept a pair of his own and half the sum alleged to have been lost. Fuming and apparently only half content, the traveler after breakfast proceeded towards the capital.

At the beginning of the following cold season the landlady's chimney wouldn't draw. An investigation was made and from the flue was dragged a pair of old breeches with nothing in the pockets.



Sister—Oh, Bob; that Dr. Scrimp is a mean little beast.

Brother—What's up with him?

Sister—You know he attended to me when I was ill. Well, he began to call regularly after that for another reason, till at last he proposed and I rejected him. And now he has charged all those lovesick calls as professional visits.—Illustrated Bits.

"No Cure, No Pay."

Judge Joline was all ready to decide what appeared to be a clear enough case in the Camden District Court, recently, says the Philadelphia Record, when an unlooked-for obstacle arose, and he reserved decision. It was in the trial of a suit brought by Dr. G. P. Finlaw, a well-known specialist, against F. Sitley, a prosperous grain dealer, to recover one hundred and fifty dollars.

The doctor stated his case briefly, explaining that he had attended Mrs. Sitley, and that Mr. Sitley had refused to pay his bill. That was plain enough, but when the plaintiff was turned over for cross-examination to ex-Judge Howard Carroll, as counsel for Sitley, the case took a somewhat different turn.

"Doctor, this is a pamphlet issued by you, is it not?" asked the attorney, presenting a small book issued as an advertising circular by the doctor.

"Yes, sir," replied the plaintiff.

"And are all its statements true?"

"Yes, sir."

"Please turn to page ten."

The doctor turned the leaves and opened the designated page.

"Now read the last line."

"No cure; no pay," quoted the plaintiff.

"That will do; that is our case; Mrs. Sitley is dead;" and the ex-judge proceeded to gather up his papers.

Judge Joline gave his spectacles a twitch, gave a turn to his fluffy mustache, and said that he would decide the case later on.

A Traveler's Tale.

The tall man with the literary stoop in his shoulders then broke the silence.

"The average native of Porto Rico," he began, "is so large that he will fill a good-sized hogshead."

A loud protest went up from the loungers in front of the post-office. The tall man cleared his throat again.

"I ought to add," he said in a softened tone, "that he will fill the hogshead with dark brown molasses."

Whereupon, the hour for dinner having arrived, the house adjourned until 2 p. m. without ceremony.—New York World.

His Only Remedy.

In a breach of promise case counsel for the plaintiff asked the defendant:

"Did you ever kiss the plaintiff?"

"Yes; many a time."

"How often?"

"I admit having kissed her almost every evening when I called to see her."

"Every evening?"

"Yes; but I was compelled to do it!"

"Compelled; how's that?"

"Why, it was the only way to prevent her singing."

Literary Notes.

Jerome K. Jerome's last story, previous to his engagement to write two plays, has been secured by The Ladies' Home Journal, and is to be printed in its January issue. It is called "An Item of Fashionable Intelligence," and deals with life in the circles of London.

BEECHER AS A SLAVE AUCTIONEER.

Even people of mature years whose memory is clear about matters before and during the war have practically forgotten that Henry Ward Beecher used his pulpit in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, as an auction block for slaves. The most famous of his "slave sales" was that of the beautiful girl, Sarah, and it was upon this occasion that the most exciting scenes ever witnessed in Plymouth Church, or in any other American church for that matter, occurred. Mr. Beecher was unusually dramatic: he put a fire into his words, as he stood the slave girl on the platform beside him, which fairly burned into the hearts of his auditors. It was not long before the people became almost hysterical with excitement. But Beecher kept on until he was ready to pass the collection baskets. Then the auditors gave vent to their feelings, and not only heaps of money was put into the baskets but men and women took off their rings, unfastened their watches and threw them into the baskets and on the platform. It was a remarkable scene, and such a one as probably will never be equaled in this country. Mrs. Beecher recalls the event with wonderful vividness in her article in the Christmas Ladies' Home Journal, when she tells the whole story of "When Mr. Beecher Sold Slaves in Plymouth Pulpit." The scene is remarkably well brought to the eye of the reader by a striking illustration made by De Thulstrup from material furnished the artist by Mrs. Beecher.

During the prevalence of la grippe, those who made use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral found it prompt to act and sure to cure. No other medicine is so safe and efficacious in all diseases of the throat and lungs, and the only remedy successful in consumption.

The Editor's Platform.

This being the time of platforms, a certain country editor announces the following as representing his objects: "Our aim—to tell the truth, though the heavens fall. Our paper—of the people, for the people, to be paid for by the people if we are lucky. Our religion—orthodox, with a firm believer in hell for delinquent subscribers. Our motto—take all in sight and rustle round for more. Our policy—love our friends and hate our enemies. If thine enemies smite thee on one cheek, swipe him with haste and dexterity at the butt of the most convenient ear. What we advocate—one country, one flag and one wife—at a time. Our object—to live in oriental splendor—and when we die we want to be buried in a pitch pine coffin with our face downward, with a clam shell in each hand so we can dig to where we belong."

The Wilkes-Barre Telephone, not long ago had this to say: "The News-Dealer has taught a lesson to a subscriber, who refused to pay for his paper and ordered it discontinued. The publisher sued the delinquent for ten cents, the balance due, and it cost the delinquent subscriber $2.35 to settle it. It was a severe but valuable lesson, and one he will not soon forget. One of the Telephone subscribers in the lower end of the county tried the same game on us recently. He owed us a balance of $6, which we tried in vain to collect. The account was placed in the hands of a justice for collection, and it cost the fellow more than double the original bill before he got through with it. It don't always pay to try to cheat the printer out of his just dues."

THE COLUMBIAN.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

OUR WEEKLY BASE BALL PICKUPS.

'Tis sad that pitcher Willie Davis contemplates studying for the ministry.

J. Earl Wagner of Washington, says that pitcher McGuire will not be sold nor will Pitcher McJames retire. Two nailed at the same time.

Pitcher Lewis of Boston, is taking a special course at Harvard.

The Chicago club has refused to exchange Dahlen for Ely.

The Cincinnati club has signed Mike Kehoe, late of Montgomery.

It is stated on good authority that Lave Cross, of the Phillies will play in Cleveland next season.

Now they claim that Stenzel was a disturber in the Pittsburg team.

Kansas City wants Bonner, second baseman of the Brooklyns. He may be secured if Manager Barnie succeeds in landing a man to take his place.

Herman Long has a bet with Billy Dahlen for $100 that Boston will beat out Chicago next season.

President Nick Young presided at his first league meeting on St. Patrick's day 1871, and he hasn't missed one since.

The Brooklyn confesses to be a loser on last years season from $10,000 to $15,000, in spite of the fact that the team started out so brilliantly and promisingly.

The guessers are now satisfied that McGraw will remain with Baltimore.

Jimmy Ryan wants to escape from Chicago. He says: "Eleven years in one city is enough for me, I'd like, to get to Philadelphia."

At the recent League meeting an informal ballot was taken on the question of opening the League season on May 1, instead of the middle of April, as heretofore. The majority of clubs favored the continuance of the former plan, namely, opening the season in April, and April 19 was decided upon as about as good a day as any on which to inaugurate the season of 1897. This means that the majority of the teams—perhaps all with the exception of the Senators—will take practice trips South in March.

Undisputed Merit.

The great success of the Royal Baking Powder is due to the extreme care exercised by its manufacturers to make it entirely pure, uniform in quality, and of the highest leavening power. All the scientific knowledge, care and skill, attained by a twenty years' practical experience are contributed toward this end, and no pharmaceutical preparation can be dispensed with a greater accuracy, precison and exactness. Every article used is absolutely pure. A number of chemists are employed to test the strength of each ingredient, so that its exact power and effect in combination with its co-ingredients are definitely known. Nothing is trusted to chance, and no person is employed in the preparation of the materials used or the manufacture of the powder, who is not an expert in his particular branch of the business. As a consequence, the Royal Baking Powder is of the highest grade of excellence, always pure, wholesome and uniform in quality. The contents of each box are exactly like every other, and will retain their powers and produce the same and the highest leavening effect in any climate, at any time. The Government Chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands in the market, in their reports placed the Royal Baking Powder at the head of the list for strength, purity and wholesomeness and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivalled.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

Resolutions passed by the Union Sunday School of Orangeville, Pa., on the death of Mrs. S. J. Houtz, wife of Rev. A. Houtz. Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father to call from our midst our co-worker, Therefore be it

Resolved, that while we humbly bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we realize that the Sabbath School, Christian Endeavor and Church have lost an energetic worker, the community a kind neighbor.

Resolved, that we cherish her sacred memory and ever heed her inspiring words, as her willing counsel was ever regarded by those who knew her as having come from the heart of a devoted Christian.

Resolved, that we extend to the husband and family our sincere sympathy, and pray God's blessing on them, also that all vacancies may be filled for the advancement of His kingdom here on earth, and that her being taken from us should only actuate us in our christian work.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be entered on the minutes of the Union Sunday School and other copies be inserted in the County papers.

An Astonished Telegrapher.

The Philadelphia Record says that the late Charles L. Chapin, the old time telegrapher, was probably the discoverer of the modern method of reading telegraph messages by sound. It occurred to him while in charge of Cornell's line from New York to Erie, that the sound made by the instrument for each separate letter were as distinctive as the letters on the dial. By careful study he enabled himself to read messages altogether by sound, and one day he surprised some of the operators under him. They had been in the habit of sending private messages over the wire, and it was impossible to stop them. Finally an operator down the line somewhere tried to work an old trick of his and get excused for a day's fishing. He telegraphed to the operator in Mr. Chapin's office, asking to get Mr. Chapin to let him off. Mr. Chapin was sitting with his back to the instrument when the message came in, and, without turning around, he said to the operator, "Tell him no." The man was so surprised that he almost fell off his chair. Eventually Mr. Chapin divulged his secret, and in time the knack of reading by sound became generally known. Now it is used entirely.

The fact that you are worth some property is no argument at all why a newspaper man should send you a paper for all eternity without your paying for it. It is a very common occurrence after we have sent out a lot of statements, for some person worth anywhere from $5,000 to $20,000, to come in boiling with wounded vanity and tell us that he guesses he is able to pay a little bill of $7.86, and that we are getting in an awful hurry for our money. You may be worth a million dollars and not have as good credit as a man not worth a cent. The man that pays his bills when they are due, pays them willingly and acts like a gentleman is the man we like to trust. We don't like to trust a man who never pays until we "dun" him, and then gets mad. We know hundreds of poor men whom we are perfectly willing to trust because we know they will pay promptly. We know a number of men in comfortable circumstances that always make trouble if you ask them to pay. —Dushore Review.

Free Silver Forces to Unite.

Conference of the Leaders to be Held Soon in Washington.

An important conference of leaders in the late campaign for the free coinage of silver—Democrats, Populists, Republicans, Silver Party and American bimetallic union representatives—will be held in Washington about December 10. The call for the conference was issued this week by Gen. A. J. Warner, president, and G. E. Bowen, secretary of the bimetallic union.

Secretary Bowen said to a reporter that he was waiting to receive the form of the call fron General Warner or instructions to issue it himself. He said it wrs expected Mr. Bryan would be present to offer advice and be consulted regarding the best plan to solidify the free silver forces and conduct an aggressive educational campaign under one organization, if possible.

The idea is to hold the silver forces together and lose no ground during the next four years, besides making new converts to the cause. Senators Jones, Butler, Teller, Dubois and Pettigrew, Governors Altgeld and Stone, Messrs. Washburn and Towne, and the executive committee of the bimetallic union are expected to be present.

Takes His Own Life.

Afraid of Losing His Mind.

Robert E. Marshall, superintendent of the Altoona division of the Pennsylvania railroad, committed suicide Monday forenoon at the residence of his brother, Dr. Charles Marshall, in Washington City, by shooting himself through the head with a revolver. Only one chamber of the weapon was found to be loaded, and though Mr. Marshall had been for a long time in a condition of health bordering almost upon nervous prostration, and seemed badly depressed by the gloomy weather of the past two days, added to the fact that the present is near the anniversary of the death of his wife, over which he was brooding sadly, it does not appear that his suicide was a matter of much premediation, but was rather the result of a sudden depression of feeling and an impulse that he could not resist.

Mr. Marshall had evidently feared just what happened to him, and for some time past had been under treatment of a specialist on brain and nervous diseases in Philadelphia, and is said to have sometimes expressed the fear that he might become insane. Mr. Marshall has no doubt that the cause of his brother's suicide was melancholia brought on by ill health. Robert E. Marshall was born in Leeds, England, in 1862, while his father was United States Consul at that port. He was graduated from the Columbian University of Washington City, and began life in the machine shops of the Pennsylvania railroad at Altoona, in March, 1881.

He was successively promoted from roadmaster to more important positions until at the time of his death he was the general superintendent of the Altoona division. He leaves two children, now at his late home in Altoona, the youngest a little girl about two years old.

The sum of $19,400 is a good price to pay for a single horse, but that amount was paid by Lewis G. Tewksbury for the "John R. Gentry" horse, at the auction sale of horses in New York recently: Before the largest crowd ever seen at a horse sale in this country and after a most sensational auction, John R. Gentry, the champion harness horse of the world, passed into the hands of Lewis G. Tewksbury, of New York city, for $19,400 at Madison Square Garden Thursday night of last week. Bids came in with such rapidity that the auctioneer could scarcely keep track of them. Four, six, eight, ten, and eleven thousand dollars were offered from different parts of the house with scarcely breathing time between. But the real battle was to come when the struggle narrowed down to two—Louis W. Wormser and Lewis G. Tewksbury. Mr. Wormser came into the battle at $12-000 and the crowd applauded. Promptly Mr. Tewksbury went $500 better. Thus the battle continued between the two with scarcely a moment's hesitation up to $15,000, which was Tewksbury's bid. Then there was a pause, followed by a round of hand clapping, which greeted Wormser's jump to $18,000. Scarcely had it died away when the other came back at him with his favorite rise of $500. There was another short pause and Wormser shouted $19,000, being a raise of a thousand dollars. Mr. Tewksbury raised it $400. The auctioneer turned to Mr. Wormser expectantly. There was no reply and on the "three" the auctioneer's gavel fell and the gallant son of Ashland Wilkes and Dame Wood became the property of the owner of Robert J., the only horse who has shown himself a dangerous rival to the king, and who will in future be his comrade. With Gentry, Robert J., (2:01 1-2) and Mascot, (2:04) Mr. Tewksbury has a stable of phenomenal greatness.

DEATH OF JOHN SCOTT, LAWYER AND POLITICIAN.

Ex-United States Senator and Former General Solicitor of the Pennsylvania Railroad Passes Away in Philadelphia.

DECLINED A CABINET POSITION.

Hon. John R. Scott, ex-United States senator from Pennsylvania and formerly general solicitor of the Pennsylvania railroad company, died last Monday at his residence in Philadelphia after a brief illness. He was seventy-four years of age. Mr. Scott was born in Huntingdon county and had little to aid him in winning the distinction he attained as a politician and a lawyer, his educational advantages being confined to the primitive district schools of his day. He studied law with Judge Thomson at Chambersburg (who was also the legal preceptor of Senator Hendricks, of Indiana), and after his admission to the bar he located in Huntingdon. He was devoted to the law and at an early age he took a high rank among the more prominent legal minds of the interior of the state.

Mr. Scott was originally a Democrat and the implacable foe of Mr. Buchanan in the latter's presidential aspirations. In 1856 he gave reluctant support to Buchanan, but earnestly resisted his Kansas policy. In 1860 he was the Democratic candidate for state senator in the hopeless Huntingdon district, but in 1861 both parties voluntarily presented him for the legislature and he was unanimously elected. In the legislature he acted with the Republicans and became one of the most ardent and effective Republican campaigners in Pennsylvania. In 1862 he was tendered the Republican nomination for state senator, when a nomination was equivalent to an election, but he declined it.

In 1868 Mr. Scott was elected United States senator to succeed Charles R. Buckalew. He served one full term, retiring from the senate in 1875. In 1857 Mr. Scott entered the Pennsylvania railroad company's service as a special counsel for the district comprising Cambria, Blair and Huntingdon counties, taking charge also of the questions arising out the transfer of the canals and railroads of the state to the company and continued to serve the company until his connection with it was severed by his election to the United States senate.

At the expiration of his senatorial term President Grant tendered him the post of secretary of the interior in his cabinet. Mr. Scott, however declined the cabinet position and reentered the service of the Pennsylvania railroad as legal adviser to Colonel Thomas A. Scott, then the president Shortly afterward he was made general solicitor of the company and its allied lines and remained in that position until his resignation in February, 1895, when he was succeeded by Hon. James A. Logan, then assistant solicitor but previously common pleas judge of Westmoreland county.

"Mugwump's" Legal Status.

Court Holds That the Term is Not an Epithet, but a Compliment.

The word "Mugwump" was defined in a Court of Justice at Wilkes-Barre on Saturday. Thomas Johns, a well-known resident of the city, and a Republican, became a convert to the silver cause in the last campaign. He wrote a number of articles for the newspapers. Recently Johns met Editor Flick, of the Daily Times. Flick said: "Hello. Mugwump." This angered Johns. He upbraided Flick, and then had a warrant issued for the editor's arrest.

At the hearing there was much discussion as to the meaning of the word "Mugwump." Justice Donahue finally decided that it meant "a respectable Republican inclined to kick over the traces." The editor was discharged, and the costs were put on Johns, the Justice claiming that Flick's salutation was complimentary, not insulting.

FIGHT WITH A MAD DOG.

Payne Pettebone of Wilkes-Barre had a desperate fight with a mad dog Saturday afternoon. He went to feed a valuable pup, which was kept tied in a kennel. It did not come out as usual, but Pettebone heard a snapping and shaking in the kennel, and upon investigation found that a strange dog was inside. He had killed the little one and had it in his teeth shaking it.

The dog came out and made for Pettebone. The latter ran, secured a root cutter, and then began a desperate fight. One of Pettebone's wrists is crippled so that he could use only one hand. Several times the dog was cut and slashed and driven back, only to renew his attack. Finally the young man ran into the barn and closed the lower half of the door, continuing the fight over it until the dog retired. Then Pettebone went into the house and got a gun, but was too exhausted and nervous to use it. Stanley Schooley came to his help, however, and killed the dog.
